Details:

Lysterfield is a quiet, semi-rural suburb in Melbourne's south-east — home to the Lysterfield Lake Park, a tight-knit community, and a growing number of aged care facilities that serve residents across Knox and the Dandenong Ranges corridor. For businesses operating in Lysterfield, professional commercial cleaning is not just a matter of presentation — in aged care, it is a matter of patient safety, regulatory compliance, and duty of care.

Realcorp Commercial Cleaning operates in Lysterfield and the surrounding south-eastern suburbs. Our primary commercial cleaning work in this area focuses on aged care facilities, where our track record speaks for itself.

Realcorp's Aged Care Presence in Lysterfield

Realcorp currently services Isomer Aged Care in Lysterfield — an active, ongoing client relationship that sits at the centre of our aged care cleaning credentials in Melbourne's south-east.

Isomer Aged Care is the kind of account that defines how we work. It is not a once-off clean or a short-term trial. It is a long-term service relationship built on consistency, compliance, and trust. The staff who clean Isomer Aged Care are directly employed by Realcorp. They are the same people, every shift. They know the layout, the preferences of the facility manager, the infection-sensitive areas, and the documentation requirements.

This is not an accident of scheduling. It is a deliberate operating model designed around the specific demands of aged care.

Our work at Isomer Aged Care is the proof-point behind Realcorp's under-5% audit failure rate — a figure we are proud of and one that places us well ahead of industry averages in aged care facility compliance.

What Aged Care Cleaning Actually Requires

Cleaning an aged care facility is fundamentally different from cleaning a commercial office or retail space. The stakes are higher. The margin for error is lower. And the regulatory framework is more demanding than almost any other sector in Australian commercial cleaning.

Infection Control

Aged care residents are among the most vulnerable populations in the community. Many live with compromised immune systems, chronic health conditions, or limited mobility. A cleaning failure — a surface not disinfected properly, a bathroom not turned over to protocol, a shared area that carries cross-contamination risk — can have direct and serious consequences for resident health.

Realcorp uses hospital-grade disinfectants across all aged care work. Our cleaning protocols are aligned with Australian infection control guidelines, including the use of colour-coded microfibre systems to prevent cross-contamination between bathrooms, kitchens, and common areas. High-touch surfaces — door handles, light switches, handrails, tap fixtures — are treated as priority zones, cleaned and documented every shift.

ACQS Compliance

Aged care facilities in Australia operate under the Aged Care Quality Standards (ACQS), which set out the expectations for quality of care and service across all aspects of facility management — including environmental cleaning. Standard 1 (consumer dignity and choice) and Standard 3 (personal care and clinical care) both have direct implications for cleaning practices and outcomes.

Realcorp's operational documentation and shift reporting supports aged care providers in demonstrating their own compliance. We maintain shift logs, cleaning records, and audit trail data that can be produced when an aged care quality assessor visits the facility. Our clients are not left scrambling to reconstruct cleaning history — it is documented and accessible.

Consistent Staff Assignments

One of the most underappreciated requirements in aged care cleaning is consistency of personnel. Residents and staff benefit from familiarity. A cleaner who knows a facility — who knows which resident's room requires extra care, which common areas carry the highest foot traffic, and which surfaces require particular attention — is a safer cleaner than one who arrives for the first time each week.

Aged care facilities that rely on cleaning subcontractors or labour-hire agencies often encounter high staff turnover, inconsistent training standards, and gaps in site-specific knowledge. Realcorp does not use subcontractors. All our cleaners are direct employees of Realcorp Commercial Cleaning Pty Ltd — engaged on proper employment terms, trained to our internal standards, and assigned to recurring sites wherever possible.

Why Direct Employment Matters in Aged Care

The cleaning industry has a subcontracting problem. Many commercial cleaning companies in Melbourne operate as management businesses — they win the contract and then pass the work to a chain of subcontractors who themselves may engage labour-hire casuals. The result is unpredictable staffing, variable training, and a broken accountability chain.

In aged care, this model fails. Here is why:

Training accountability. When Realcorp trains a cleaner, that training is owned by us. We know what was covered, when it was done, and whether the individual has demonstrated competency. When a subcontractor trains their own team — if they train them at all — that knowledge is invisible to us and to the aged care provider.

Police clearance. All Realcorp staff who work in aged care hold the required police clearances. We manage this process directly, we track expiry dates, and we do not send uncleared staff to aged care sites. With subcontractors, this responsibility is outsourced — and the risk is borne by the aged care

Site knowledge. A directly employed cleaner who has worked the same aged care facility for six months knows things no new subcontractor ever will. They know the facility's specific infection control layout, the preferences of the nursing staff, and the quirks of the building. That knowledge has real cleaning value.

Accountability when things go wrong. If a cleaning issue is identified at an aged care facility serviced by Realcorp, there is one phone call to make: to us. We investigate, we respond, and we fix it. There is no finger-pointing between Realcorp and a subcontractor. We own the outcome entirely.

Our Track Record: Under-5% Audit Failure Rate

Realcorp's audit failure rate across our aged care accounts sits under 5%. This figure comes from internal compliance audits conducted at our aged care sites, tracking cleaning outcomes against the agreed scope of work and infection control standards.

An audit failure occurs when a clean does not meet the required standard — a missed high-touch surface, a non-compliant product used in a food preparation area, a documentation gap. In the aged care cleaning sector, an audit failure rate of 10-15% is not unusual. Realcorp operates at under half that benchmark.

The Isomer Aged Care account in Lysterfield is a direct contributor to this performance. The consistency of staffing, the depth of site knowledge, and the rigour of our internal audit process across this account reflect what Realcorp's model looks like in practice.

GPS and App-Based Documentation

Every Realcorp shift is tracked via our scheduling and documentation app. Cleaners clock in and out via GPS-enabled devices, confirming physical presence at the site. Shift completion is logged against the agreed scope of work, and any variations or incidents are captured in real time.

For aged care providers, this creates an auditable record of cleaning activity. If an aged care assessor requests evidence of cleaning frequency or scope compliance, the data exists and is retrievable. This is increasingly important as aged care facilities face more structured quality assessment processes under the reformed Aged Care Act framework.
