Realcorp Commercial Cleaning school cleaning Melbourne: one vetted, directly employed team for independent, private, and boarding settings

Realcorp Commercial Cleaning is a Melbourne-based commercial cleaning contractor providing school cleaning services to independent, private, Catholic, and boarding schools across metropolitan Melbourne and regional Victoria.

The cleaning contractor question at a school is not just an operational one. It is a safeguarding question.

Every person who enters a school building has access to children. Every person present during school hours — or in boarding facilities during residential hours — is in proximity to students in the school's care. Who those people are, how they were recruited, what checks were conducted, and who is accountable for their conduct: none of that is a facilities management question. It is a child safety governance question.

For school business managers, bursars, and principals, the right answer is not "our cleaning contractor uses trusted subcontractors." The right answer is: "Every person cleaning this school is police-cleared, directly employed, site-inducted, and accountable to one organisation."

That is Realcorp Commercial Cleaning.

The problem: schools cannot afford unknown people on site

The standard commercial cleaning market runs on subcontracting. A cleaning company wins a contract, then engages subcontractors or labour hire workers to deliver it. The cleaning company may never have met those workers. Vetting may be minimal. These are not employees — they are engaged on availability, not suitability.

In an office building, that model creates quality and consistency problems.

In a school, it creates a safeguarding problem.

Victorian schools operate under the Child Safe Standards, which require organisations working with children to establish robust safeguarding systems — including vetting of all people who have contact with children. That obligation does not stop at employed staff. It extends to contractors and service providers.

A school that engages a cleaning contractor without understanding their employment model, their vetting practices, and their chain of accountability is carrying a safeguarding risk that a properly structured contractor engagement should eliminate entirely.

The stakes: what an inadequate contractor costs a school

Safeguarding exposure. An unvetted, unknown person cleaning a school — particularly in a boarding house, changing area, or other sensitive location — creates a safeguarding gap that no business manager wants to be explaining to a principal or board.

Parent and community trust. Independent and private schools operate in a trust environment. Parents make deliberate enrolment decisions, and their expectations include that the school manages all contracted services with the same rigour it applies elsewhere.

Regulatory and accreditation risk. School registration and accreditation frameworks in Victoria require evidence of appropriate child safety practices, including contractor management. An inadequate cleaning contractor is a documented gap in those frameworks.

Inconsistency and operational disruption. Schools running rotating, unknown cleaning staff experience the predictable consequences of high-turnover contractors — inconsistent results, repeated inductions, cleaners unfamiliar with the building, and the ongoing management overhead of a contractor that needs constant oversight.

Why Realcorp Commercial Cleaning: auditable standards, zero subcontractors

Realcorp Commercial Cleaning was built on a direct employment model that delivers the accountability school environments require.

Police clearance before site access

Every Realcorp Commercial Cleaning team member undergoes a police check before accessing any school site. This is not optional — it is a condition of employment and a condition of deployment. No one enters a school site without a current police clearance on file. Records are maintained centrally and available on request to support your contractor documentation under the Child Safe Standards.

Multi-layered recruitment

Realcorp Commercial Cleaning's recruitment process is more rigorous than standard commercial cleaning employment. It includes formal application, reference checking, identity verification, police clearance, and a structured induction before any new team member is deployed. The objective is not to fill a position — it is to identify people who are suitable for the environments we operate in.

Site-specific induction

Each school has a specific layout, specific access requirements, specific sensitive areas, and specific protocols. Our site induction process ensures every team member understands the school's environment before they begin work. That includes the location of student-only areas, appropriate conduct in areas where students may be present, and the school's specific contractor requirements.

Site induction records are maintained centrally and available on request — directly supporting your contractor management documentation under the Child Safe Standards.

Zero subcontractors. One team.

Realcorp Commercial Cleaning does not use subcontractors. The people cleaning your school are Realcorp Commercial Cleaning employees. Their conduct is our responsibility. Their training is our investment. When something needs to be resolved, you are dealing with the organisation that directly employs the people doing the work — not a management layer chasing a subcontractor.

Accountability that reaches the owner

Realcorp Commercial Cleaning is family owned and owner-operated. When a school business manager needs to escalate an issue, they are not dealing with a national call centre or a regional manager with limited authority. They are dealing with the owner of the business. That accountability is direct, personal, and auditable.

What Realcorp Commercial Cleaning cleans at independent and private schools

Realcorp Commercial Cleaning provides cleaning services across all areas of independent, private, and boarding school settings:

Frequently Asked Questions

*School cleaning contractors Melbourne — how do I find the right one? The right school cleaning contractor for a Melbourne independent or private school directly employs all staff (zero subcontractors), police-clears every person before site access, runs documented site-specific inductions, and can demonstrate accountability through a family-owned or owner-operated structure. Realcorp Commercial Cleaning meets all of these requirements. Our deployment model was built for environments where the identity and suitability of every person on site is a compliance requirement, not a preference.

*Are cleaners at private schools police checked? They should be — and with Realcorp Commercial Cleaning, they are. Every Realcorp Commercial Cleaning team member undergoes a police check before deployment to any school site. This is a condition of employment and a condition of site access. Police clearance records are maintained on file and available to support your contractor management documentation under the Child Safe Standards. If your current cleaning contractor cannot confirm police clearance for every person working at your school, that is a gap that needs to be addressed — not managed around.

*What cleaning do schools need? Schools require a range of cleaning services depending on their facilities: daily classroom and amenities cleaning during term; sports and PE facility cleaning including high-use changing rooms; laboratory cleaning with appropriate product selection; performing arts and music room maintenance; and boarding house cleaning covering resident rooms and shared facilities. Holiday periods provide the opportunity for deep cleaning programmes that cannot be fully delivered during term. Realcorp Commercial Cleaning manages all of these under a single contracted relationship — one team, one point of accountability, fully auditable.

*Can you clean boarding school residential areas? Yes. Realcorp Commercial Cleaning provides boarding house cleaning including resident room maintenance, shared bathrooms and amenities, common rooms, study areas, and dining facilities. Boarding house cleaning operates to a residential standard — these are spaces where students live, not just learn. Our directly employed, police-cleared team is the appropriate deployment model for the sensitive environment of a residential setting within a school. That is not a marketing position. It is a compliance-first operational standard.
